Image 3 of 11The Philips Norelco Hair Clipper features Philips' DualCut Technology, which means it has low-friction engineering and double-sharpened blades. Image 4 of 11A lithium-ion battery powers the Philips Norelco Hair Clipper, but you can also plug it in to keep using it when the battery needs to recharge. Image 5 of 11The Philips Norelco Hair Clipper's lithium-ion battery requires only one hour of charging to give you up to 120 minutes of cutting time. Image 6 of 11The Philips Norelco Hair Clipper's guard comb adjusts to 23 cutting length settings. You make your selection by rotating the dial. Image 7 of 11You can adjust the Philips Norelco Hair Clipper's guard comb to cut your hair to between 3/64 inches and 7/8 inches long. Without the comb, the blades cut close at 1/32 inches. Image 8 of 11The Philips Norelco Hair Clipper has self-sharpening titanium blades that are designed to cut twice as fast as the blades on standard Philips clippers. Image 9 of 11The titanium blades on the Philips Norelco Hair Clipper are maintenance-free and can be washed under running water. Image 10 of 11You can use the Philips Norelco Hair Clipper's turbo setting when you need a power boost during haircutting. Image 11 of 11You can use the Philips Norelco Hair Clipper on any hair type. The Philips Norelco 7100 looks more like a shaver than a clipper. It feels durable yet lightweight in your hand, and it has a comfortable grip. While it comes with just one attachment, its guard comb has 23 settings. It can also be used with no guard. With a simple turn of its dial, you have length options from 1/32 inch to 7/8 inch, and you don't have to keep changing guard combs. It's also virtually maintenance free. The clipper's titanium blades are self-sharpening, which is a common feature among the best hair clippers, and they can be rinsed under water for cleaning.The Philips Norelco operates on rechargeable lithium power. According to Philips, its battery provides up to 120 minutes of operation after only an hour of charging, and it gave us 18 minutes beyond that in our lab. While figuring out the attachment was at first a team effort, switching the setting dial was easy, and we liked having so many settings. After checking it out in our lab, we were eager to test the clipper on our volunteers.Once we started cutting hair, we had a quick change in our thinking. At 7 1/4 inches, the clipper felt long and awkward in the hands of our stylists – they found it difficult to find a comfortable angle – and it wasn't easy to maneuver. We had the impression that cutting your own hair with this clipper might be easier than cutting someone else's. One of our testers agreed. "I always do my own hair," he told us. "And with this I could just zip right through it."On a positive note, this clipper did seem to have plenty of power, with a bonus turbo boost feature.The Philips Norelco Hair Clipper 7100 comes with a 45-day moneyback guarantee and a two-year limited warranty that extends to three years when you register the product online. Also, Philips' customer service is excellent, with easy telephone access and a 24/7 chat service that impressed us. Copyright 2009 - 2022 by techninn. TRADEINN RETAIL SERVICES, S.L. Whichever kind of grooming or beauty electronics you're after, chances are that Philips has one you can buy. That's certainly the case for hair clippers. While they're not what the Dutch brand is most recognised for, it comes as no surprise that the company stocks a plentiful range of products for lowering your lugs – and a pretty decent one at that. The company's highest-ranking model are the Series 9000 Hair Clippers, which have earned a place in our best hair clippers guide. Boasting digital touch controls, motorised combs, titanium self-sharpening blades, and 400 length settings for the ultimate precision cut – these hair clippers are packed with some ingenious features, especially when compared to what else is on the market. But how do they stack up when it comes to getting your mop chopped? Let's find out. Philips Series 9000 Hair Clippers: Price And AvailabilityPhilips Series 9000 Hair Clippers were first released in 2019 and are still available to buy now. When launched, they had an RRP of £90 but that's come down a little since then. For example, they can be picked up on online retailers like Amazon at the moment for around £75. In the box, Philips' hair clippers come with a 3-pin UK charging cable and three hair comb attachments: 1 x 1-7mm, 1 x 7-24mm, and 1 x 24-42mm. The Series 9000 Hair Clippers boasts a pretty slick design. Ergonomically, these clippers have been well thought through and they sit in the hand nicely. A bit more weight would have been nice, but they do look premium. Upon closer inspection of the materials used, the plastic accents do feel a little cheap but nothing that bothers us too much. We do like the addition of a fancy digital touch dial that raises and lowers the gradient with the swipe of the thumb. Be warned, though – operating this does take some getting used to and it can feel a little too sensitive at first. Overall, we're big fans of the design of the Series 9000 Hair Clippers. The only real downside is that there's no charging cradle, which is pretty disappointing for a premium pair of clippers with an £80 RRP. Philips Series 9000 Hair Clippers: PerformanceIn our experience using Philips Series 9000 Hair Clippers, we found they cut our hair precisely and with ease. The titanium blades are exceedingly sharp and clip hair with zero effort – even super thick hair. What's most impressive about Philips' clippers, though, is the range of cutting lengths available. You can adjust the length from 1mm right up to 42mm in increments of 0.1mm, meaning you have over 400 different lockable lengths to choose from. This has to be the best cutting range on the market and is delivered via just three combs meaning there's no hassle changing over many various attachments. We did find that there's quite a big learning curve involved when using these clippers, however, and new users must be really cautious when trimming to ensure cuts are even. For example, the comb attachments are quite flexible and if you push too hard against your head when clipping, the combs flex and can change the cutting length. The operation does take some getting used to, so if you don't take it easy and go in all guns blazing, you might find that you end up cutting a much shorter length than you originally intended and have to change your entire haircut to match the mistake (we may or may not be speaking from experience here). While this could be seen as a major issue, it's more a matter of getting used to how these clippers function and feel in the hand. As for battery life performance, it's nothing short of excellent. These clippers provide two full hours of cordless use between charges and take only an hour to charge once they're plugged in to recharge, which proves very handy if you're using them to trim several people's hair in one sitting. They also function while the charging cord is plugged in. Philips Series 9000 Hair Clippers: VerdictPhilips Series 9000 Hair Clippers are a great all-round set of clippers brimming with features that you won't find in most conventional offerings. While operation does take some getting used to, the self-sharpening titanium blades breeze their way through even the thickest of hair, battery life is impressive and an ergonomic design means they're comfortable to hold for long hair-cutting sessions. Hard to fault; just go easy with you're a hair clipper newbie. Liked this? Why not fully upgrade your grooming routine: Prices - Philips Series 9000 Hair Clippers.▼
